

THE ARTS HOUSE

about The Arts House

Occupying the almost 200-year-old building that was Singapore's first Parliament House, The Arts House has played an active role in the Singapore arts and cultural scene. The House promotes and presents multi-disciplinary programmes and festivals in literary arts, film, performing and visual arts.

The Arts House is run and managed by Arts House Limited (AHL).
AHL also presents the Singapore International Festival of Arts, and manages Goodman Arts Centre and Aliwal Arts Centre.

Chamber

The Chamber is the most historically significant space in The Arts House, in fact, it is the heart of the House. Formerly the Parliamentary Chamber where members of the Singapore Parliament gathered, the Chamber had special furniture shipped in from London, and the upholstery you see now is the original that was in place since 1954.

To facilitate understanding by all members who may speak in English, Mandarin, Malay or Tamil, simultaneous interpretation was provided, and the device attached by the side of the seats allowed members to listen to the proceedings in any of the four languages. The round plates on the back of the seats used to be the speakers. The castle-like design on them is part of the Colonial crest used when Singapore was a British Colony. The Chamber is now popularly used for recitals, thought-leadership conferences and lifestyle shows.

Blue Room & adjoining VIP Room

Originally blue in colour, the room keeps its moniker as a reminder of its rich history. This former Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Room was used as a lounge for members of Parliament to have their meals and tea while discussing issues in a more relaxed manner in between debate sessions.

In the 1950s, the adjoining Old Select Committee Room, now called the VIP Room, was the venue of a secret meeting between the then-Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew and the underground Communist chief, Fong Chong Pik aka The Plen (for plenipotentiary). This was also the room where Mr Lee discussed strategies with his Old Guard ministers to take on the opposition Barisan Socialis in debate. The room is now a versatile space used both for performances and corporate functions, including press conferences, product launches and receptions.

Gallery I

The exposed brick entrance into Gallery I is possibly the oldest feature of the Old Parliament House. These walls were treated with stucco or Madras Chunam plaster made from shell lime, egg white, coarse sugar and water soaked with coconut husks for 24 hours. The surfaces still endure to this day, and are so hard that nails cannot be knocked through.

This unique space is best used for exhibitions and cocktails.

Gallery II

The Gallery, in true Tuscan architecture, features high ceilings held up by tall columns and enriched by simple trimmings in its cornices. This open visual arts space is the perfect venue for exhibitions, talks, corporate receptions and product launches.

The Gallery used to be part of the Legislative Assembly Library, and later from 1980, it was the Committee Room where meetings of the Select Committee were held. Important Bills like the Copyright Bill, the Maintenance of Religious Harmony Bill, the Parents Bill and many others were once deliberated here.

Screening Room

Experience the magic of the silver screen in this 75-seat film theatre, which used to house several offices during the Legislative Assembly and Parliamentary years in the late 20th century. It is now a dedicated space for movie lovers as we partner the Singapore International Film Festival (SGIFF), Big Eyes, Big Minds: Singapore International Children's Film Festival and Endeavours Documentary Film Festival.

Away from the humdrum of the office, this versatile and intimate space is a perfect setting for corporate functions such as media briefings and presentations, or a great way to treat your friends to a private film screening!

Living Room

The Living Room was where the nerve centre of the Parliament House used to be.

From 1955 to 1959, this room was the General Office of the Old Parliament House, in which administrators coordinated papers and reports for Parliamentary sessions. Later in 1959, after the formation of the government, the room was used for meetings of the People's Action Party. Now a multi-purpose room, the Living Room is suitable for seminars and workshops, book and product launches, as well as a rehearsal space.

Play Den

The Play Den is an intimate and unique space that has been converted into a state-of-the-art Black Box theatre with fully equipped lighting and sound systems and retractable seats that enhance the versatility of the space.

This room was where the first court cases in Singapore were heard. In the 1950s, it served as the General Office for Singapore's first Chief Minister David Marshall. The room and the back stage comprised a general office and two other rooms — Marshall's private office and that of his secretary's. In subsequent years, this room was used as a library.

Council Room

For nearly 40 years from 1959 to 1999, this room was the office of the then-Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew when he attended Parliament, and subsequently used by Mr Goh Chok Tong. Prior to its use as the Prime Minister's room, it was utilised by the clerk of the Legislative Parliament, who advised the Speaker and members of the House on practices and procedures.

With a floor area of 41m², this is one of the smallest and simplest rooms in The Arts House. It is now popularly used for Board meetings.
